JERUSALEM-Defense Minister Ezer Weizman will fly to Cairo today in an effort to revive the joint Israeli-Egyptian military talks that were suspended in January, it was announced here vesterday.

Weizman's mission will represent the first high-level talks between two rael and Egypt in more than two months. He is to meet with Egyptian Straighter Mohammed Abdel the first high-level talks between Is-Delense Minister Mohammed Abdel Ghani Gamassy and may meet with President Anwar Sadat.

Announcement of Weizman's trip by Israeli Radio came shortly after the Israeli parliament, by a comfortable margin, endorsed Prime Minister Me nachem Begin's Middle East policy in the first real test of his parhamentary strength since his trip to Washington

While Begin won the vote, 64 to 32, with nine abstentions, there was a hint of future trouble in the fact that seven out of the nine abstentions were from Begin's chief coalition partner, the Democratic Movement for

In a brief welcoming statement, Gen. Geisel said be "will be very happy if this visit can contribute . . . !!o forming a fair opinion on the Brazilian reality."

The presidential entourage arrived here from Caracas, where Carter spoke before the Venezuelan National Con-gress yesterday morning in what White House aides said was a "major address." Carter said that only a partner-ship between Industrialized countries and the developing nations of the Third World can create an international system "in which each individual and each nation has the hope of a better future."

President Carter declared that the United States his eager to work with you to shape a more just inter-national economic and political order."

While Carter outlined several steps the United States has taken to aid Third World nations, he announced no major new programs or policy shifts. An administration official later conceded there was little new in the speech, which he described as "a packaging" of "politically for its later. ically feasible" steps to spur Third World economic development.

As such, Carter's words may have disappointed his audience, for they fell far short of the aspirations voiced by Venezuelan President Carlos Andres Perez.

Perez set the backdrop for Carter's speech with a 40-minute toast Tuesday night at a state dinner he hosted for the American party.

The $20 million, 236 bed Greater Laurel-Beltsville Hospital will not even open its doors to patients until May 1. But already the experts are saying it is in financial trouble.

As a result, it may have to charge As a result, it may have to charge patients unusually high rates in its first year, futher aggravating the problem of rapidly rising medical costs here, and it may still run a $1 million deficit that will be hilled to the taxpayers of Prince George's County

It was not supposed to happen this When county officials sought state and local government approval for the hospital six years ago, their plans colled for a first year occupancy rate high enough to break even and charge reasonable rates

Now, according to state officials who regulate hospital charges, the Greater Laurel facility is projecting first year occupancy of about half the those original estimates and million dollar losses as a result.

The construction and financial prob-lem posed by the hospital, built and overated by the county, provide another might into the rapidly rising cost of medical care—both locally and nationally. Viewed from the perspective of the entire metropolitan area's needs, the facility may not be needed

But considered from the perspective of persons living in upper Prince George's County the hospital fills their desire to have a community faclins for their medical and surgical
